Dear Professor Lederberg:

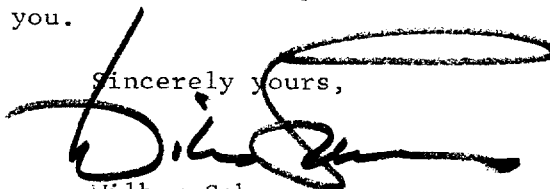

Don't misunderstand.

I am joking about your entrance into television problems. Actually, I am delighted that anyone as able as you becomes interested in these public problems.

Whereas I feel that you are wrong in some of the things you have written about public television (or whatever we are going to call it now), still I find myself in accord with you at least three fourths of the time. I resonate with you on your reaction to friendly, and feel at least as strongly as you do about keeping politicians out of public television. And as for Bill Shockley, I am at least as disturbed as you about. By what I have or haven't done about that, I fear I have lost him as a friend, which I don't like to see happen.

Let's have lunch,
or a cup or a glass, at your convenience and talk about some of these television problems.
The time is up to you.

Sincerely yours,

Wilbur Schramm
